

Hi Cathy;

Speaking of John H. and your readers that seem to think he passed his polygraph, I ran across the following excerpt from the FOIA papers.

Not only does it appear he failed them but under 'strange behavior'. The final conclusions written by Duncan are so very telling and it appears both him and his boss concluded the very same thing.

Read what has been highlighted and try to get anyone out there to explain how Detective Gray has walked away from this as nothing with no further investigation?

I think this part of the FOIA papers wasn't meant to be left to read. Someone slipped that should have taken this out. I read further that there is a DVD documenting the entire polygraph. I bet that would be very telling!

Let's hope someone wakes up out there!

From conclusions of John H. Georgia Polygraph

Duncan said after the tests were given, he took a break to score all of the charts and went back in the room to confront him with the results. At first, _____ never denied anything but just sat there and listened to him he believed that _____ s almost resigned himself to the fact that he was involved, but recouped and then started the denial of the exams.

Duncan stated _____ made some very strange statements to him and said more than once, "I can't tell you", and then he would catch himself and what he was saying, and then followup by saying, "Because that's not the truth".

Duncan advised the undersigned that he and his supervisor who also witnessed the entire examination process, were so convinced that _____ had involvement with these murders, that if he were to confess to him, his involvement, they already had a plan in place where they would hold him for the officers in Michigan to obtain a warrant. He said they were that convinced.

Duncan advised that there was no question in his mind, whatsoever, that _____ has some involvement with the murders of these children. He stated he didn't know to what degree of involvement he may have, whether knowledge, did the murder or assisted, but he firmly believes he was involved. Duncan stated that in polygraph, you can't just pull out one part, and hang your hat on it. Duncan did however state again, that there is no question in his mind that he is involved with these murders.

In regards to the first two polygraphs with Stebbins and Robinson,

Does this sound like someone that passed a polygraph?!?!?
